Double Sheet To-morrow.

Advertisers are again requested to send in their announcements intended for the double sheet STAR of to-morrow as early as possible so that they may be properly displayed and classified. In order to print seasonably for delivery the very large additional issue of the double sheet STAR it is necessary to go to press at an early hour: hence this suggestion to the advertisers

The decoration day sun, which early in the day seemed to be negligent of duty, made amends at a later hour, as the number of redfaced patriots, who ascribe their color to this cause, can testify: Though it burned and blistered, the sun did valuable service in chasing away the threatening rain clouds which might otherwise have dampened the ardor of orators and peets, and played sad havoc with the spring-suits of excursionists.

Repeated investigations in England and in this country give testimony to the prevalence of color blindness. A recent examination among the employes of railroads centering in Philadelphia disclosed the fact that three and a half per cent. of them were unable to distinguish colors at all, and that eight and a half per cent. could not do so with sufficient accuracy to make their employment safe. This is even a smaller percentage of cases than has usually been discovered in such examinations, and may fairly be taken to represent the extent to which the disease prevails among railroad men. Such a condition of affairs might be expected to alarm a timid public, but so many life-threatening horrors have been shown to lurk in the household that it is with a feeling of relief that the traveler, escaping from them, puts his life in the hands of a color-blind engineer. Efforts have been made, however, to reduce the dangers of the situation to a minimum. A precaution which commends itself is to test the vision of all applicants for service on trains. It is said that a system of safety and danger signals independent of color, has been devised for the New York Metropolitan road. The position of the signal and not its color gives the necessary information. At night a light is thrown upon the signal which makes its position easily distinguishable. As far as service upon roads which still continue the use of the color signals is concerned, a form of employment is discovered for which the colored race possesses in one respect superior fitness. Dr. Burnett's examination of 3,000 colored persons of the District showed, as stated in THE STAR, that the percentage of color-blind among them was much smaller than among a corresponding number of whites. Here also will be a promising, and, in one respect, appropriate field of labor for some of the gentler sex, when they obtain through the ballot the glorious privilege of competing upon equal terms with men for employment on railroads. Every-day observation and scientific investigation, alike, show that women are far keener in the discrimination of colors than men, and the percentage of the color-blind among them is very slight.

Under the propitious conditions of our smooth asphalt pavements the use of the bicycle has grown amazingly of late in Washington, and numbers of young men, with their handsome legs protected by leathern leggins, are to be seen skooting around through the city, and even extending their adventurous career to the hilly drives of the Soldiers' Home grounds Also under the favoring circumstances of the vast extent of parking upon our streets, the young ladies are practicing archery with a zeal that promises to make the daughters of America as proficient with the bow and arrow as the sons are with the rifle. At present they shoot a little wild, and as a consequence people passing upon the streets find it advisable to keep a prudent distance from the range of the targets; but all this will speedily be remedied and we shall soon doubtless have archery as firmly established in favor here as it has long been in England. The young people who are taking it up may like to know that according to a late writer upon the matter, the distances usually taken in an archery match are forty, sixty, eighty and one hundred yards. the last named distance calling, however, for considerable muscular power on the part of the archer. It is claimed by good authorities that it is better for a beginner to shoot at a target one hundred yards distant than at one at forty yards, for a long range archer is sure to be a good marksman at a short range, while it is by no means certain that one who can count on a target at forty and sixty yards will be able to run up a score on one which is one hundred yards removed.

It is hard to keep track of the ups and downs of the Mexican exposition project. Not very long ago a cabinet minister was dismissed for opposing the plan. The outlook now is that another cabinet minister, an advocate of the exposition, will withdraw, and that all idea of taking further steps in the matter will be dropped with him. This method of procedure may be truthfully styled revolutionary. If there is any force in precedents, manufacturers should feel safe in beginning at once to make reparations to exhibit their goods at Mexico. The next announcement that the exposition will take place should be due about the proposed date of opening, and the exhibition may be safely over before the next reaction sets in.

Another attempt has been made to engraft upon our free republican institutions the practices of despots of the old world. We do not refer to any political measures now before Congress. It appears that one De Vietter of Rotterdam, has imitated the kings and members of royal families who have married through ambassadors, by taking to himself, by proxy, a comely widow of New York, though the ocean rolled between them while the ceremony was performed. The bride took a wedding trip, immediately after marriage, and visited her husband in Rotterdam. She has now returned to this country and repenting of the match asks that it be annulled as illegal.

American interest in the English races, which drooped under the Derby news, revives again to-day. Parole has gone to the front in another race.

The Chilian and Peruvian navies have so far forgotten the amenities which are expected, and which have hitherto prevailed in their engagements, as to sink some of the opposing vessels. Since the two nations have quit making faces, and begun to fight in earnest, interesting news from the seat of war may be ex-

Etna is celebrating decoration day by a choice display of fire-works and by thundering salutes which suggest the roll of artillery.

The greatest and most pleasing discovery of the age to bousekeepers is the incontestable fact that the following leading brands of FLOUR are not only the handsomest in the District of Columbia, but also in the United States:

"CERES."—The magnificent Minnesota Patent Process. MINNEOLA. — A splendid Minnesota Patent Process. STERLING.—The celebrated St. Louis Fancy Patent, and GOLDEN HILL, the standard Family Flour of the District.

We defy competitors to bring forth any Flour superior to Ceres, Minneola or Sterling, and we feel assured that any housekeeper who tries them once will never use anything else.
